There are approximately 1,100 law students at Cardozo, including approximately 70 LL.M. candidates. Since 1998 when the graduate program began, more than 350 graduate students from nearly 70 countries have studied here.

Cardozo has a network of more than 8,500 alumni, who hold respected legal, governmental, and corporate positions, live throughout the United States and abroad, and provide support as mentors and prospective employers

About the LLM

The General Studies LL.M. Program is distinctive in its flexibility and breadth of offerings. Students design their own curriculum in keeping with their specific goals and interests, pursuing a cohesive and focused program of study developed with the director of graduate and international programs.

Optional concentrations are offered in three areas: Corporate, Commercial and Securities Law; Alternative Dispute Resolution; and International and Comparative Law. The Comparative Legal Thought LL.M. Program is the first of its kind in any US law school. The program capitalizes on Cardozo's longstanding reputation in legal theory and jurisprudence and its faculty's interdisciplinary work, which provides a more diverse and broader approach to the law than one might receive in traditionally constituted law environments. The program is designed primarily for students interested in preparing for the teaching market and for lawyers who want to study legal theory and interdisciplinary approaches to the law. With a strong faculty and distinguished visiting international scholars, Cardozo offers many courses in jurisprudence, law and philosophy, critical legal studies, religion, comparative constitutionalism, and law and literature. Students may pursue a concentration in Jewish Law as part of this program.

Cardozo offers two courses designed specifically to help international students prepare for the challenges of graduate law study in the United States. LL.M. students consistently find Introduction to U.S. Law and Advanced Workshop in Legal Research and Writing an invaluable part of their graduate legal education.

Tuition fees

For the 2009-2010 academic year, Cardozo has instituted a tuition charge for the LL.M. degree program of $43,200 for the year.
